Civil rights activist Bob Moses (The Algebra Project) (<http://www.algebra.org/>) famously helped organize a voter registration drive in Mississippi that changed the political landscape for the black community. He also believed that something else was necessary for full citizenship in society: math literacy. Oliver Hill (Virginia State University) (<http://www.vsu.edu/status/404.php>) agrees that learning algebra is a civil right. Also featured: John Nunnery (Old Dominion University) (<http://www.odu.edu/directory/people/j/jnunnery>) has caught the attention of the White House with his classroom collaboration model that gets children excited about math. And: Rose Asera tells the remarkable story of how Uri Treisman transformed Berkeley's math program. Plus: Sometimes all it takes to grab kids' attention is one really good teacher. Dan Meyer (Stanford University) (<http://mrmeyer.com/>) uses video to make math problems real.
